

Blocks 86–100: Haiku

The following blocks are more about composition than about the shapes that compose them. I call them haiku blocks because they represent a poetry of shape that feels more organic than in the previous sections. Here you will not find a lot of repetitive shapes or balanced constructions. Instead you will find a composition of pieces that eludes the static nature of more traditional block structures.

