

Blocks 16–35: Rectangles

I love a perfectly symmetrical block, but I also love a block that does something a little unexpected. Setting a rectangle in a square block is the simplest way to add a little flavor. A rectangle, at its core, is simply a square with more personality. A square has four equal sides, and no matter which way you turn it, it will always look the same. A rectangle has more versatility—every time you turn a rectangle, you are dealing with a new possibility.

